

Rainy Day Woes

You have imagined your wedding day a hundred times:

The sun is shining, everyone is smiling and you feel on top of the world.

Chances are in reality, most of us have to find beauty in imperfections and have to adopt a bigger heart if things don't go as planned.

[I have my fair share of wedding hiccups during my wedding in 2005. I have since packed up my "grievances" and moved on]

So what if it rains?

So what if your flower girl falls ill?

My advice is: -

Put minor dramas into perspective. As long as your man turns up and you are surrounded by family and friends who love you, the little inconvenience don't matter. What your guests will remember is the bride and groom looking radiantly happy - so keep smiling!

* To minimise your agony, build in contingency plans

e.g. Clamy feet are uncomfortable so pack spare shoes in the car, cotton buds to wipe lipstick and mascara stains

A SPARE SHIRT FOR YOUR MAN!
