

When to Start Sourcing For Wedding Shoes?

Getting panic to find perfect wedding shoes at the last minute seem common as some brides feel that footwear is of the least importance in the gamut of wedding preparations.

Don't ever think that people will not look at bride's shoes. No longer do feet remain hidden under traditional hopped skirts, tulle and bales of fabric. The simplicity of wedding dresses today has prompted renewed interest in bridal footwear. People will of course see what footwear the bride is wearing.

If you're the bride-to-be and wanting to buy shoes, be wise! Don't just consider the look. Just because they are the most gorgeous wedding shoes you've ever seen, maybe even the most expensive - doesn't make them the most suitable shoes to wear for up to 12 hours on your special day. Find wedding shoes that are comfortable on your foot. Think about your personality. Your gait, posture and activities planned during your photo shoot and/or wedding.

Did you know?

When you don a pair of high heels, the height of the heel increases the lift of your bottom by 25%. High heel shoes also elongate your legs, make them appear slimmer, create a taut butt and give you the necessary sex appeal.

However, the higher the heel, the more stress you put on your lower back and also making your back muscles contract. Know your own limit and do not pain yourself on your first day honeymoon!

It's recommend that once you've found your dress, you should start looking for the perfect shoes immediately for your wedding. You should have your shoes by the time your gown is delivered and ready to be altered. You will need to bring your shoes to every fitting so that the hemline remains the same.

With your shoes finalised, you can also firm up the overall theme of the accessories, matching them with diamante based, pearl based or flower based necklaces, earrings and hair pieces.

Take pictures of your dress. If the gown designer objects to your request, ask for fabric swatches or take close ups of the fabric and use that as your basis to shop.

To get familiar with your shoes, practice walking in them with your partner. Remember to remain poise and keep your chin up.

Now, walk to the altar and make yourself the most charming bride in the world with your perfect gorgeous wedding shoes!
